

SOCIALISATION CHECKLIST

How to use this checklist

Over the course of your puppy's life it may be exposed to many of these things. We want to ensure that all encounters are positive and not scary! The more things you can introduce your puppy to in the important early developmental months the more stable and resilient your dog will be for life.

Try not to introduce more than a few of these things at a time, and if you feel that the puppy is overwhelmed or even unsure, do not continue introducing new things that day.

When introducing anything new, set your puppy up for success:

- Start with a calm dog
- Have plenty of treats on hand
- Always ensure that the puppy has the ability to move towards the new thing and also to move away.
- If the puppy does not want to investigate that is OK try again another day!
- Reward the puppy for approaching or even looking at something new.

If your puppy reacts strongly to anything ensure you simply remove the puppy from the situation calmly. Call us straight away so we can help you change this reaction.

You should see an increase in confidence each time the puppy is introduced to the new 'thing'- if you don't, please call us straight away!
